Paul currently performs at festivals, a wide variety of community and cultural events, workshops, spiritual and community gatherings, as both a public speaker, Minister of Religion, Musician (Bard) and/or assisting with AV production and media.

His music is a highly eclectic repertoire of originals and unusual traditional musical pieces that blend new age, blues, celtic, middle eastern, gypsy, gospel, bluegrass, jazz, and other multicultural influences together into an evocative musical soundscape. He combines rich emotive vocals, traditional acoustic instruments and modern technology together to perform, record and video document, music and the arts as the universal language of unity and empowerment.

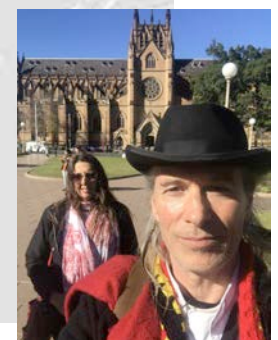

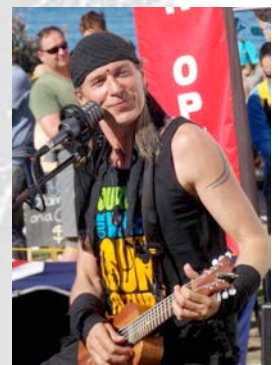

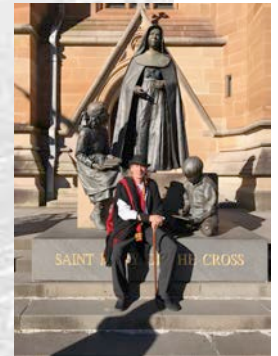

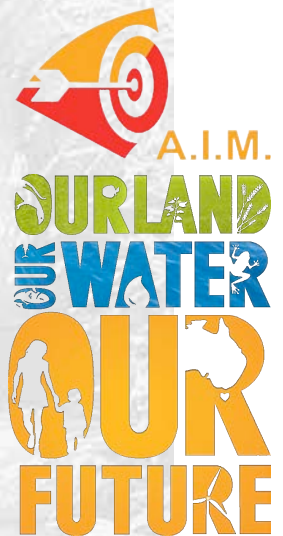

From the year 2000, after years of exploring the core foundations of many different spiritual faiths, He began an applied theological practice (Advaita Vedanta*) that illuminated the common ground between all religions, spiritual practices, music and social change. In 2004 he was initiated into the Holy Ramakrishna Order by The Reverend Pravrajika Ajayaprana Mataji.

In 2010, He became aware of the rapid rise of 'inappropriate mining'() and the importance of protecting our precious water resources, prime agricultural land, environment, cultural heritage and as a consequence a sustainable future for our children and grandchildren. He immersed himself in research and activities to understand this industry and its impacts on ecological and social communities. He founded Our Land, Our Water, Our Future Inc www.ourlandourwaterourfuture.org and began an intense journey of community-based education and communication through direct community engagement.

Initially focused on the impacts of inappropriate mining, His work soon expanded from an examination of corporations and their interaction with governments and communities into a global vision of unification.

Through his creative and active work with communities Paul is using his unique creative and communication skills to:

- inspire, empower, engage, energise, support and connect people (communities, groups and individuals);
- promote local enterprise, local food and local economy; health and wellbeing; self-education and self-reflection; return to nature; resource self-sufficiency and resilience; and voluntary simplicity.

He undertakes this innovative work through musical and audio-visual performances, education and information presentations, workshops, and relationship building with communities and individuals.

In mid-2013, after a period of intense activity and in-kind performances with many varied community groups, Paul recognised the creative, community-based facilitation process he was engaging with. He collaboratively restructured his work to develop creative community building and community connection projects to empower individuals to “Be the change you wish to see in the world” – Gandhi Ji.

From mid 2016, recognising the importance of a positive solutions based approach to our current global dilemma, he began raising awareness about the efficacy of cannabis/hemp and through his developing cultural connections with the indigenous, became active in the protection of fundamental human and common law rights. Paul believes it is the disruption of our inherent core spiritual foundations, fundamental human rights violations and fundamental common law violations that are responsible for the global chaos now occurring on planet earth.

His facilitation work includes:

- Musical and audio visual performances (solo and interactive) at community fundraisers, awareness raising, and educational events;
- Musical and educational workshops;
- Multi-media presentations;
- Online and community-based activities to connect community leaders and groups across Australia to share information, skills, networks and develop grassroots solidarity;
- Online community forum/bloggging to connect and unify diverse and geographically distant community groups;
- Direct engagement with rural communities;
- Development of a mobile renewable energy system to power off-grid performances in remote, regional and rural communities; as well as to offer educational/demonstration of transportable renewable energy;
- Collaborating with key stakeholders, organisations, community groups and communities to engage with and facilitate positive change, that supports self-sustaining activities and events;
- Teaching meditation practices and building spiritual awareness through ministering to communities both through direct engagement and online communities
- Teaching meditation practices and holding Vigils and “Truth Gatherings” within the context of community based action and organising.

(*) Advaita Vedanta - Non Dualistic Vedanta is a perennial philosophy based on the Vedas. It gives full freedom to each individual to evolve morally and spiritually according to his own faith and conviction. It includes fundamental truths found in all religions of the world. Vedanta teaches the aim of human life is to realise the divinity.

() Inappropriate mining – all mining activities including CSG, open cut and long wall mining, related infrastructure and associated extraction industries that challenge boundaries and the security of natural resources such as water, agricultural soils and land, air, flora and fauna as well as the social fabric of regional communities.
